1. QUOTA

Each high school, middle school, elementary school, and private art teachers may enter twenty pieces of student artwork from each school. The two Tabor City schools may enter thirty pieces per school.

2. SELECTION

When selecting student entries for participation, consideration should be given to every grade level, as well as those students who do not have an opportunity to take art.

3. ORIGINALITY

All entries must be original. If there is any doubt as to the originality of a work, do not submit it. In signing the Entry Form the teacher has certified its originality. Any submitted work found to plagiarize will be disqualified and any awards will be withdrawn.

- a. The art teacher must assume the responsibility of informing students of the specific rules of the competition and the specific criteria upon which artwork will be judged.
- b. No work that has been directly copied from any published source may ever be entered into competition, unless the student significantly and creatively modified or reinterpreted the original work. For example, Andy Warhol incorporated another artist's published photographs of Marilyn Monroe into his own work, modifying them in his own style.
- c. In general, copying from the works of others is not permitted. However, some students may be limited by environment or experience and have to rely on a published image as a guide for visual representation. In these instances, the student's artwork must modify or reinterpret the original idea in order to be acceptable for competition. For example, a student may wish to include a representation of a dinosaur in a work: yet, never having seen one, the student must rely on the representation of others for its form and image.
- d. The art teacher must assume the responsibility of making the ethics of art competition known to students and to not approve the entry of any work if its originality is doubtful. Keeping this policy in mind will also help avoid copyright infringement problems for the student artist.
